Four agencies were awarded monetary donations during our Community Awards Night. They were the Clinton County SPCA, Clinton County Women's Center, Annie Halenbake Ross Library and KCnet's Tiger Den Security Project.

Amy Weaver represented The Clinton County SPCA has a great reputation for releasing healthy animals for adoption and 98% replacement for dogs. They offer volunteer programs, have a Friends of SPCA who just finished a Pet Walk; and they board animals. Their wish list includes: Dry Dog and Cat Food;

Cat litter; Cleaning supplies Paper towels and toilet tissue; General office supplies - paper, pens, pencils, tape, copy paper, etc. and Stamps.

Aimee Grugan-Long represented Clinton County Women's Center and talked of their mission to eliminate personal and institutional violence through supportive and cooperative practices in all aspects of their individual programs and collective efforts. Their 24 Hour Hotline is - 570-748-9509.
After 29 years, they are still every bit as committed to their mission statement with a belief that all people have the right to a life free from the fear of violence. For more information:

Edward Forbes, President of Annie Halenbake Ross Library talked of the Library stepping into the next century of service by following the State's Initiatives known as PA Forward. The library staff and board believe in the programs and services that will help move Clinton County residents forward through Basic Literacy, Health, Finance, Information and Civic and Social resources.
A child who reads just 8 books during the summer will have the skills necessary to start school in the fall. An adult who reads to children also benefits by keeping the brain active thus shortening times diagnosed in diseases such as Alzheimers. For more

Suzanne Foust, Executive Director of KCnet and Downtown Rotarian, spoke of the need for public safety cameras based on the vandalism that has occurred at the Community built Tiger's Den playground. Several years ago KCnet received funds to place security cameras around the town. With local foundations and community organizations stepping up to help raise the necessary funds, security cameras can now be placed in strategic areas to watch over the playground.
